BRIEF HISTORY OF NEWCOMERSTOWN

Newcomerstown, first settled in 1814 by Nicholas Neighbor from Morris County, N. J., was actually a familiar name on the frontier long before any of the ancestors of present "old families" crossed the Alleghenies and entered the wilderness which lay beyond the Ohio.

Established as the capital of the Delaware nation sometime around 1760, it was a village nearly a mile square containing about 100 log cabins when David Zeisberger visited it in 1771. The Moravian Missionary came at the invitation of Chief Netawatwes who also was known as King Newcomer, and it was in front of the Indian chief's cabin that he stood at noon March 14, 1771 and delivered the first Protestant sermon preached in the Northwest Territory. Today that site is marked by a fieldstone monument erected by Newcomerstown Historical Society.

At the close of the Revolutionary War this section was part of Washington County and granted to soldiers in payment for their devotion to the cause of independence. Most of that now within the limits of Newcomerstown was granted to John Bever of Virginia in a patent signed by President John Adams March 20, 1800. He in turn sold it to the early settlers.

Sixty emigrants made up the first band of settlers and others followed soon after they arrived. Among them were many ancestors of residents of the town today—Neighbor, Mulvane, Miller, Tufford, Crater, Gardner, Stouffer and Booth.

When the Ohio Canal was dug in 1827, the village was laid out and streets laid out at the time included Canal, Basin, Bridge, and Cross. Since that time several others have served to preserve the names of early settlers for posterity—Neighbor, Mulvane, Goodrich, West, Nugen and Pilling. The village was incorporated in 1868.

In 1840 the town had a population of 270. Its growth over the ensuing 100 years, while never phenomenal, has been pleasingly steady, with greatest periods of increase coming when Clow's in 1895 and Heller's in 1917 chose Newcomerstown for the site of factories.

All east and west streets number from North and South Bridge Streets. . . . All north and south streets number from East and West Canal Streets . . . . S. E., S. W., N. E. and N. W. shows in which section of the city the street is located. . . . Even numbers will be found on north and west sides of streets. . . . Uneven numbers will be found on east and south sides of street.
