

The Twenty-Third Psalm

The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters, He restoreth my soul. He leadeth me in the taths of righteousness for His name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death. I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; Thy rod and +thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anothtest my head with oil; my cup runneth over, Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever

Chief Doc King, a full-blooded Cherokee Indian and former "medicine man" in the Oklahoma territory, died at the age of 107 years at his farm home in the Booth vicinity five miles southeast of Newcomerstown Thursday night at 9:30.

Infirmities of age was the only cause of the death of the native American who traveled all over the country with his Indian medicine show and came to Newcomerstown 27 years ago.

"Chief" King had been in prime health until two years ago when he was forced to take to his bed. He had been up on a few occasion since then but was unable to work.

His family reported he was born in what was then the Oklahoma territory on Oct. 14, 1834. With the Cherokee tribe he was the "medicine man" and he followed this line the remainder of his life.

He was reportedly "kidnapped" by white men in the Oklahoma territory many years ago to be used as an attraction for their medicine show. It wasn't long until he had gone into the business for himself.

Sometime later he returned to the territory where he was "married from the heart" with age-old Indian pledges to Katie Fisher. His widow, now 90 years old, survives and lives on the five-acre farm near Booth.

They had 17 children, including five sets of twins, but only eight survive.

The Kings came to Newcomerstown with their medicine show in 1915. Several of the sons got jobs at the James B. Clow Co. "pipe shop". The pay was good so they decided to remain here.

The family settled on a piece of land near Marlatts Run but the sons who had jobs lived in Newcomerstown for a while.

For years Mr. King practiced his medicine trade. His wife, also a full-blooded Cherokee, has dabbled in the art herself and occasionally mixes a few roots and herbs.

About six years ago Mr. King, then 101, was hit by an automobile near the Pilling street bringe. He suffered severe head and back injuries and doctors had no hope for him. Although he was unconscious for nine days he regained his health in two months and became active again.

In the 1930 census his age was given as 100. That was a mistake, he later declared; he was only 95 at that time.

He was a member of the Rosebud Reservation at Blue Ridge, South Dakota which was an association of Indians who travelled over the country with medicine shows. He joined at the age of 87. He was proficient in Indian language, both sign and oral.

In addition to the widow he is survived by the following sons and daughters: James, John, Josephine, Herman, Thomas, Fisher, and Mrs. Carmelia Myers, all of this vicinity, and Walter who resides in Colorado.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at the Rescue Mission, West State street, with Fulton Eurich in charge. The body will remain at the Bonnell funeral home until time of the services.

He had once requested that he be buried on the farm at Booth beside a certain tree. His family has decided to carry out that wish.

NEWCOMERSTOWN — Services for John R. King, 114, of Riverside Manor Nursing and Rehabilitation Center will be held Monday at 2 in Addy Funeral Home. He died Thursday.

Burial will be in East State Street Cemetery. Calling hours are Monday from noon to 2.

Born at Miseogu, Okla., he was a son of Chief Greyhound and Katie Fisher King. His father was a chief of the Cherokee Indians. He was an employee of the former James B. Clow Co., the former Heller Tool Co. and also had been a logger.

His wife, the former Irene Brown, died in 1941.

Surviving are a sister, Camilia Meyer of Norwalk; and several nieces and nephews. Five brothers and a sister are deceased. Washington.

We are enclosing some general information regarding our genealogy research materials, and information to help you determine if you will likely find an ancestor on the Final Dawes Commission Rolls.

If, after careful review of these materials, you believe you are likely to find an ancestor on the final Dawes Roll or another roll of the Cherokee Nation citizens, then please complete the information form and forward it to us with the $20.00 (per name) for the first hour fee. Usually a response will be returned to you within 4 to 6 weeks. If it is to take more than one hour to complete your request a representative will call you to discuss further research with you.

Certainly there are Cherokee that do not qualify for Tribal Membership. Enclosed is a brochure regarding the First Families of the Cherokee Nation. You may wish to document your eligibility for this organization.

Tom Mooney's book, Exploring Your Cherokee Ancestry, is available in our Museum Gift Shop for $12.00 plus $3.50 shipping and handling (Oklahoma residents add 55 cents for sales tax). It lists most of the major sources for Cherokee genealogy, where they may be found, and what information might be expected from each source.

Please refer to the enclosed brochure for information on membership and how to join the Cherokee National Historical Society.

PLEASE SEND A S.A.S.E.

(2) having a permanent residence within the Cherokee Nation; (now the 14 northeastern counties of Oklahoma).

If the Ancestor had separated from the tribe and settled in states such as Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, or Texas, then they would have lost their citizenship within the Cherokee Nation. ONLY enrolled members of the Cherokee Nation named on the Final Rolls and/or their descendants are given Certificates of Degree of Indian Blood and/or Citizenship in the Cherokee Nation. For those who fall in this category and those with CDIB cards we urge you to consider a membership in First Families of the Cherokee Nation.

Note: The Cherokee National Historical Society does NOT register tribal members.

Applications may be obtained by: writing, Cherokee Nation, Dept. of Registration, P. O. Box 948, Tahlequah, OK 74465; or, by internet download at www.cherokee.org.

NOTES:

- 1.) Have you carefully read this information and considered the location of your family during the period of enrollment?
- 2.) Do you understand the terms of citizenship in the Cherokee Nation? And, what citizenship did a person have not residing in the Cherokee Nation?
- 3.) What census does your ancestor appear on? United States? Colonies? Tribal Nation? Etc.

~~~ Wa-do, Thank You, for the opportunity to discuss the possibility of your citizenship in the Cherokee Nation and/or a membership in First Families of the Cherokee Nation.

Genealogical Research for Native Americans

Our staff in the Department of Anthropology receive many inquiries on how to conduct genealogical research on Native American ancestry. The following text has been compiled by our staff to assist you in locating sources of information. Please note that the Smithsonian Institution is not a source for genealogical research and has no records relating to Indian census or Indian tribal rolls.

The office of Tribal Enrollment, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Mail Stop 2614-MIB, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20245, does provide information on tracing one's Indian ancestry and the requirements to qualify legally for membership in a federally recognized Indian tribe.

If the name of the tribe to which your ancestor belonged is known, the National Archives and Records Administration, 700 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20408, may be able to help you. They have on file census rolls and other Indian records identified by tribe, band, or tribal group dating from 1830-1940. The National Archives will search the records if given the name of the Indian ancestor (English and Indian names) and the name of the tribal group along with the approximate date associated with the tribe. They also provide information on other sources for genealogical inquiry.

If the name of your Indian ancestor's tribe is not known, then you must conduct genealogical research in the manner that is usual for cases where Indians are not involved. You must attempt in the process to determine the tribal group in order to apply to the sources described above. If you cannot find the tribal name, but have attained from such research a quite precise location and period from which your Indian ancestry derives, then possible tribal identification may be determined by reading standard sources on Indian history and local history. These sources can help you find out which Indian tribes(s) or group(s) were in that region at that date. Given that information, you will still, of course, need the name of your Indian ancestor in order to locate the person in records arranged by tribe.

Among the sources for genealogical research are: records of birth, baptism, marriage, and death, which may be found in churches, town, city, county, or state clerk or records unit. County or state historical societies and archives, newspaper archives, and libraries should also be consulted.

Local sources for independent genealogical research include the National Archives and Records Administration; The Local History and Genealogy Room, Library of Congress, First & Independence, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20540; and the library of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, 1776 D St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

PORT WASHINGTON

By Mrs. Mse Linard Phone 498-8040

A switch from a man-to-n in to a zone defense was credited as one of the key factors in Port Washington's victory over visiting Tusenrawas Valley Friday night 70-68.

The Purple Riders traced 22-17 at the first stop when Coach Joe Lopez decided to change tactter. The hosts trailed 37-28 at the half then began finding the right defensive - offensive combination and closed the gap to within three points, 54-51, going into the final quarter.

Post pulled even at 56 56 sarly in the fourth frame and it was tight the rest of the way before Mike Peeper lead the verdiet from the foul line with two seconds left.

Tusky Valley rebounded Peoper's missed second field, but a last-ditch shot went as tray.

Tim Page led a five-player contingent of double figure Purple rider shooters with 17 points, Greg Bender getting 15, Jeff Huston and Jim Hagen 11 each and Jerry Stephens 10. Ray Nist got 16 to top the Bill Frye-coached. Trojans with Larry Adams adding 15. Jim Burkhart 12 and Dave Clugston 11.

Tusky Valley led 22 to 21 in rebounds with Burkhart grabbing nine while Huston pulled in 10 for Port.

The Purple Riders made 21 of 50 action shots, winning the decision at the foul line by sinking 28 of 40 white the Trojans made 24 of 48 from the floor and 20 of 32 from the foul rtripes. Port missed 10 fouls the first half then came back with 20 of 25 after the intermission.

The Cherokee made their new capital at Tahlequah (Okla.), instituted a public school system, published newspapers, and were the most important of the Five Civilized Tribes. In the U.S. Civil War their allegiance was divided between North and South, with large contingents serving on each side. By a new treaty at the close of the war they freed their black slaves and admitted them to tribal citizenship. In 1891 they sold their western territorial extension, known as the Cherokee Strip; in 1902 they approved the division of the reservation into allotments; and in 1906 tribal sovereignty was abolished. Tribal entities still exist, however, and many Oklahoma Cherokee live on tribal landholdings. With a 1990 population of about 370,000, the Cherokee, while scattered, are by far the largest Native American group in the United States. Close to 6,000, descendants of the few who successfully resisted removal or returned after the removal, live on the Eastern Cherokee (Qualla) reservation in W North Carolina.

Final (Dawes) Roll Index

Index to the Final Rolls of the Citizens and Freedmen of the Five Civilized Tribes in Indian Territory

1889 - 1914

This is the index to the names of individuals entitled to enrollment on the rolls of the various tribes comprising the Five Civilized Tribes in Indian Territory (Oklahoma). The index entries maybe searched by name and tribe. Each person listed will have Name, roll number, category (Cherokee by Blood, Cherokee Minor, Cherokee Freedmen, etc.) Each index entry gives an enrollee's name and final roll number. After a person's enrollment category and final roll number have been determined, the Final Rolls Database can be searched to discover the enrollee's census card number.

A copy of the census card can be obtained by writing the National Archives-Southwest Region, P.O. Box 6216, Fort Worth, TX 76115-0216. The cost is $10 per census card.

"DOC" KING

Chief Doc King, a full-blooded Cherokee Indian and former "medicine man" in the Oklahoma territory, died at the age of 107 years at his farm home in the Booth vicinity five miles southeast of Newcomerstown Thursday night at 9:-

Infirmities of age was the only cause of the death of the native American who traveled all over the country with his Indian medicine show and came to Newcomerstown 27 years ago.

"Chief" King had been in prime health until two years ago when he was forced to take to his bed. He had been up on a few occasion since then but was unable to work.

His family reported he was born in what was then the Oklahoma territory on Oct. 14, 1834. With the Cherokee tribe he was the "medicine man" and he followed this line the remainder of his life.

He was reportedly "kidnapped" by white men in the Oklahoma territory many years ago to be used as an attraction for their medicine show. It wasn't long until he had gone into the business for himself.

Sometime later he returned to the territory where he was "married from the heart" with age-old Indian pledges to Katie Fisher. His widdw, now 90 years old, survives and lives on the five-acre farm near Booth.

They had 17 children, including five sets of twins, but only eight survive.

The Kings came to Newcomerstown with their medicine show in 1915. Several of the sons got jobs at the James B. Clow Co. "pipe shop". The pay was good so they decided to remain here.

The family settled on a piece of land near Marlatts Run but the sons who had jobs lived in Newcomerstown for a while.

For years Mr. King practiced his medicine trade. His wife, also a full-blooded Cherokee, has dabbled in the art herself and occasionally mixes a few roots and herbs.

About six years ago Mr. King, then 101, was hit by an automobile near the Pilling street bringe. He suffered severe head and back injuries and doctors had no hope for him. Although he was unconscious for nine days he regained his health in two months and became active again.

In the 1930 census his age was given as 100. That was a mistake, he later declared; he was only 95 at that time.

He was a member of the Rosebud Reservation at Blue Ridge, South Dakota which was an association of Indians who travelled over the country with medicine shows. He joined at the age of 87. He was proficient in Indian language, both sign and oral.

In addition to the widow he is survived by the following sons and daughters: James, John, Josephine, Herman, Thomas, Fisher, and Mrs. Carmelia Myers, all of this vicinity, and Walter who resides in Colorado.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at the Rescue Mission, West State street, with Fulton Eurich in charge. The body will remain at the Bonnell funeral home until time of the services.

He had once requested that he be buried on the farm at Booth beside a certain tree. His family has decided to carry out that wish.

Indian Widow Taken At 96

Funeral services were held Sunday aefternoon at the Bonneli funeral home for Mrs. Katie Fisher King, 96, widow of Chief "Doc" King. who died in 1942 at the age of 107.

Mrs. King was born June 6. 1952 on the Lawrence Reservation in Oklahoma. Traveling with a medicine show they came to this vicinity and settled here. Their sons found work in local industries. They lived on a farm soutl of Newcomerstown. When the "Chief" died, he requested that he be buried under a large oak on the farm.

She was the mother of 17 children, seven of whom survive. They are Fisher, Thomas and Josephine of the home; Mrs. Camilla Myers, Route 1; John of Kimbolton, R. D., James of Columbus and Herman of Massillon. Also surviving are 18 grandchildren.

Fulton Eurich, superintendent of the Rescue Mission, officiated She was buried beside her husband.

When services were held Sunday afternoon the beaded ceremonial buskskin robe and sandals of Mrs. King were draped across the foot of the casket. Later they were placed in the casket and buried with her.

North American Indians of Iroquoian lineage who constituted one of the largest politically integrated tribes at the time of European colonization of the Americas. Their name is derived from a Creek word meaning "people of different speech"; many prefer to be known as Keetoowah or Tsalagi. They are believed to have numbered some 22,500 individuals in 1650, and they controlled approximately 40,000 square miles (100,000 square km) of the Appalachian Mountains in parts of present-day Georgia, eastern Tennessee, and the western Carolinas at that time.

Traditional Cherokee life and culture greatly resembled that of the Creek and other tribes of the Southeast. The Cherokee nation was composed of a confederacy of symbolically red (war) and white (peace) towns. The chiefs of individual red towns were subordinated to a supreme war chief, while the officials of individual white towns were under the supreme peace chief. The peace towns provided sanctuary for wrongdoers; war ceremonies were conducted in red towns.

When encountered by Spanish explorers in the mid-16th century, the Cherokee possessed a variety of stone implements including knives, axes, and chisels. They wove baskets, made pottery, and cultivated corn (maize), beans, and squash. Deer, bear, and elk furnished meat and clothing. Cherokee dwellings were bark-roofed, windowless log cabins, with one door and a smoke hole in the roof. A typical Cherokee town had between 30 and 60 such houses and a council house, where general meetings were held and a sacred fire burned. An important religious observance was the Busk, or Green Corn Festival, a first-fruits and new-fires celebration.

The Spanish, French, and English all attempted to colonize parts of the Southeast, including Cherokee territory. By the early 18th century the tribe had chosen alliance with the British in both trading and military affairs. During the French and Indian War (1754-63) they allied themselves with the British; the French had allied themselves with several Iroquoian tribes which were the Cherokee's traditional enemies. By 1759 the British had begun to engage in a scorched-earth policy that led to the indiscriminate destruction of native towns, including those of the Cherokee and disrupted by British actions. In 1773 the Cherokee and Creek had to exchange a portion of their land to relieve the resulting indebtedness, ceding more than two million acres in Georgia through the Treaty of Augusta.

In 1775 the Overhill Cherokee were persuaded at the Treaty of Sycamore Shoals to sell an enormous tract of land in central Kentucky to the privately owned Transylvania Land Company. Although land sales to private companies violated British law, the treaty nevertheless became the basis for the colonial settlement of that area. As the American War of Independence loomed, the Transylvania Land Company declared its support of the revolutionaries; the Cherokee became convinced that the British were more likely to enforce boundary laws than a new government and announced their determination to support the crown. Despite British attempts to restrain them, a force of 700 Cherokee under Chief Dragging Canoe attacked the colonist-held forts of Eaton's Station and Fort Watauga (in what is now North Carolina) in July 1776. Both assaults failed, and the tribe retreated in disgrace. These raids were the first in a series of attacks by Cherokee, Creek, and Choctaw on frontier towns, eliciting a vigorous response by militia and regulars of the Southern colonies during September and October. At the end of this time, Cherokee power was broken, their crops and villages destroyed, and their warriors dispersed. The defeated tribes sued for peace; in order to obtain it, they were forced to surrender vast tracts of territory in North and South Carolina at the Treaty of DeWitt's Corner (May 20, 1777) and the Treaty of Long Island of Holston (July 20, 1777).

Peace reigned for the next two years. When Cherokee raids flared up in 1780 during the American preoccupation with British armed forces elsewhere, punitive action led by Col. Arthur Campbell and Col. John Sevier subdued the tribe again. The second Treaty of Long Island of Holston (July 26, 1781) confirmed previous land cessions and caused the Cherokee to yield additional territory.

Cherokee syllabary invented by Sequoyah.

After 1800 the Cherokee were remarkable for their assimilation of American settler culture. The tribe formed a government modeled on that of the United States. Under Chief Junaluska they aided Andrew Jackson against the Creek in the Creek War, particularly in the Battle of Horseshoe Bend. They adopted colonial methods of farming, weaving, and home building. Perhaps most remarkable of all was the syllabary of the Cherokee language, developed in 1821 by Sequovah, a Cherokee syllabary—a system of writing in which each symbol represents a syllable—was so successful that almost the entire tribe became literate within a short time. A written constitution was adopted, and religious literature flourished, including translations from the Christian Scriptures. Native Americans' first newspaper, the Cherokee Phoenix, began publication in February 1828.

The Cherokee's rapid acquisition of settler culture did not protect them against the land hunger of those they emulated. When gold was discovered on Cherokee land in Georgia, agitation for the removal of the tribe increased. In December 1835 the Treaty of New Echota, signed by a small minority of the Cherokee, ceded to the United States all Cherokee land east of the Mississippi River for $5 million. The overwhelming majority of tribal members repudiated the treaty and took their case to the U.S. Supreme Court. The court rendered a decision favourable to the tribe, declaring that Georgia had no jurisdiction over the Cherokee and no claim to their land.

Georgia officials ignored the court's decision, President Andrew Jackson refused to enforce it, and Congress passed the Indian Removal Act of 1830 to facilitate the eviction of tribal members from their homes and territory. Removal was implemented by 7,000 troops commanded by Gen. Winfield Scott. Scott's men moved through Cherokee territory, forcing many people from their homes at gunpoint; as many as 15,000 Cherokee were thus gathered into camps while their homes were plundered and burned by local residents. Subsequently these refugees were sent west in groups of about 1,000, the majority on foot.

The eviction and forced march, which came to be known as the Trail of Tears, took place during the fall and winter of 1838-39. Although Congress had allocated funds for the operation, it was badly mismanaged, and inadequate food supplies, shelter, and clothing led to terrible suffering, especially after frigid weather arrived. About 4,000 Cherokee died on the 116-day journey, many because the escorting troops refused to slow or stop so that the ill and exhausted could recover.

When the main body had finally reached its new home in what is now northeastern Oklahoma, new controversies began with the settlers already there. Feuds and murders rent the tribe as reprisals were made on those who had signed the Treaty of New Echota.

In Oklahoma the Cherokee joined four other tribes—the Creek.

removed from the Southeast by the U.S. government in the 1830s. For three-quarters of a century, each tribe had a land allotment and a quasi-autonomous government modeled on that of the United States. In preparation for Oklahoma statehood (1907), some of this land was allotted to individual tribal members; the rest was opened up to homesteaders, held in trust by the federal government, or allotted to freed slaves. Tribal governments were effectively dissolved in 1906 but have continued to exist in a limited form.

At the time of removal in 1838, a few hundred individuals escaped to the mountains and furnished the nucleus for the several thousand Cherokee who were living in western North Carolina in the 21st century. Early 21st-century population estimates indicated more than 730,000 individuals of Cherokee descent living across the United States.

BEGINNING GENEALOGY

When researching your genealogy, always begin with yourself and go back. Write down your information as completely as possible. Be sure to include full given and maiden names as well as complete dates (day/month/year) of birth, death and marriage. Do not forget to list complete places (city/county/state) of birth, death and marriage.

Start looking for records at home such as Bible records, marriage licenses, obituaries, birth certificates and death certificates. Interview your older relatives to find out what information they know about your ancestors. Learn where your ancestors resided and where they originated. Visit your local library, locate the cemetery where they were buried and visit the county courthouse where they lived.

You will discover genealogy can be fun, educational and worthwhile. Generations to come will thank you.

Cherokee Family Research Center

CHEROKEE FAMILY RESEARCH CENTER

The Cherokee Family Research Center (CFRC) is located at the Cherokee Heritage Center, which is operated by the Cherokee National Historical Society, Inc. Established in 1963, the society is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to preserve and promote Cherokee history and culture and to educate the public about that history and culture.

The CFRC was established to aid persons in search of their Cherokee heritage and ancestry. The resources of the Cherokee Family Research Center are specific to the Cherokee people from the Trail of Tears (1838-1839) to the time of Dawes enrollment (1900-1906). The resources primarily concern the Cherokee Nation and its historic 14 county jurisdiction in Northeastern Oklahoma.

The CFRC has a growing collection of records dealing with the Cherokee Nation intermittently from 1817 to 1819 and 1835 to 1909. Available records include the 1848, 1852 and 1924 North Carolina censuses. Library resources continually expand and improve. Some of the resources available include:

As Cheyenne members of the 1863 delegation prepared to leave Kansas for Washington, opposite, they were photographed with their Indian agent in Fort Leavenworth; left to right: agent Samuel G. Colley, War Bonnet, Standing in the Water, and Lean Bear. impressed with the white woman's ways. Indeed a primary purpose behind most of the Indian delegations invited to Washington was to impress Native American leaders with the wonders of white civilization: To educate them by sharing culture and knowledge and to convince them that capitulation and assimilation might be the best way for them to respond as the white world moved in on their lands.

All along the way during their railroad trip, crowds, sometimes hostile, had lined up at train stations to see the car full of Indians passing through. The Indians were unaccustomed to a world full of white people—it seemed impossible that there could be so many! According to an agent with a later delegation, the Indians in his care solved among themselves the mystery of how so many white people could appear outside the car in town after town. Just as their people relocated their villages from site to site, the Indians reasoned, so these must be the same white people every time, using their superior technology to move their city with them.

The highlight of the 1863 delegation's visit was the meeting with President Abraham Lincoln at the White House on March 27. A large crowd awaited them there—the secretaries of State, Treasury, the Navy, and the Interior, the ministers of England, France, Prussia, and Brazil, and their families jammed the East Room. The nervous Indian delegates sat at one end of the long room, facing the restless spectators. Despite the best efforts of Lincoln's secretary, John Nicolay, there was a considerable amount of pushing and shoving to get a close look at the Indians.

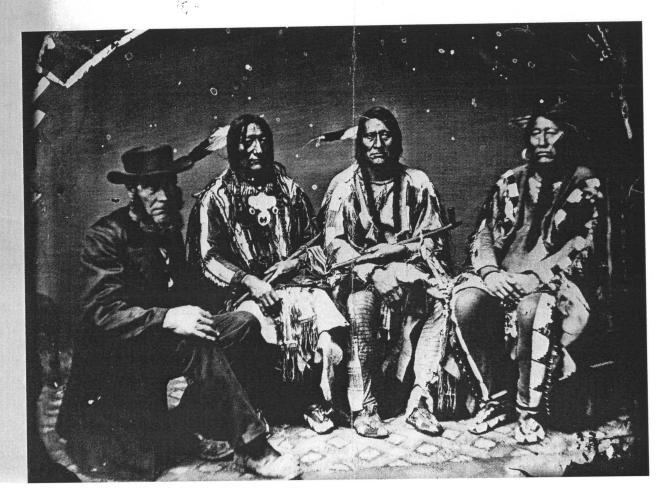

"There unfortunately seems to be an incurable habit among the good people of our country in the house of the Chief Magistrate to press

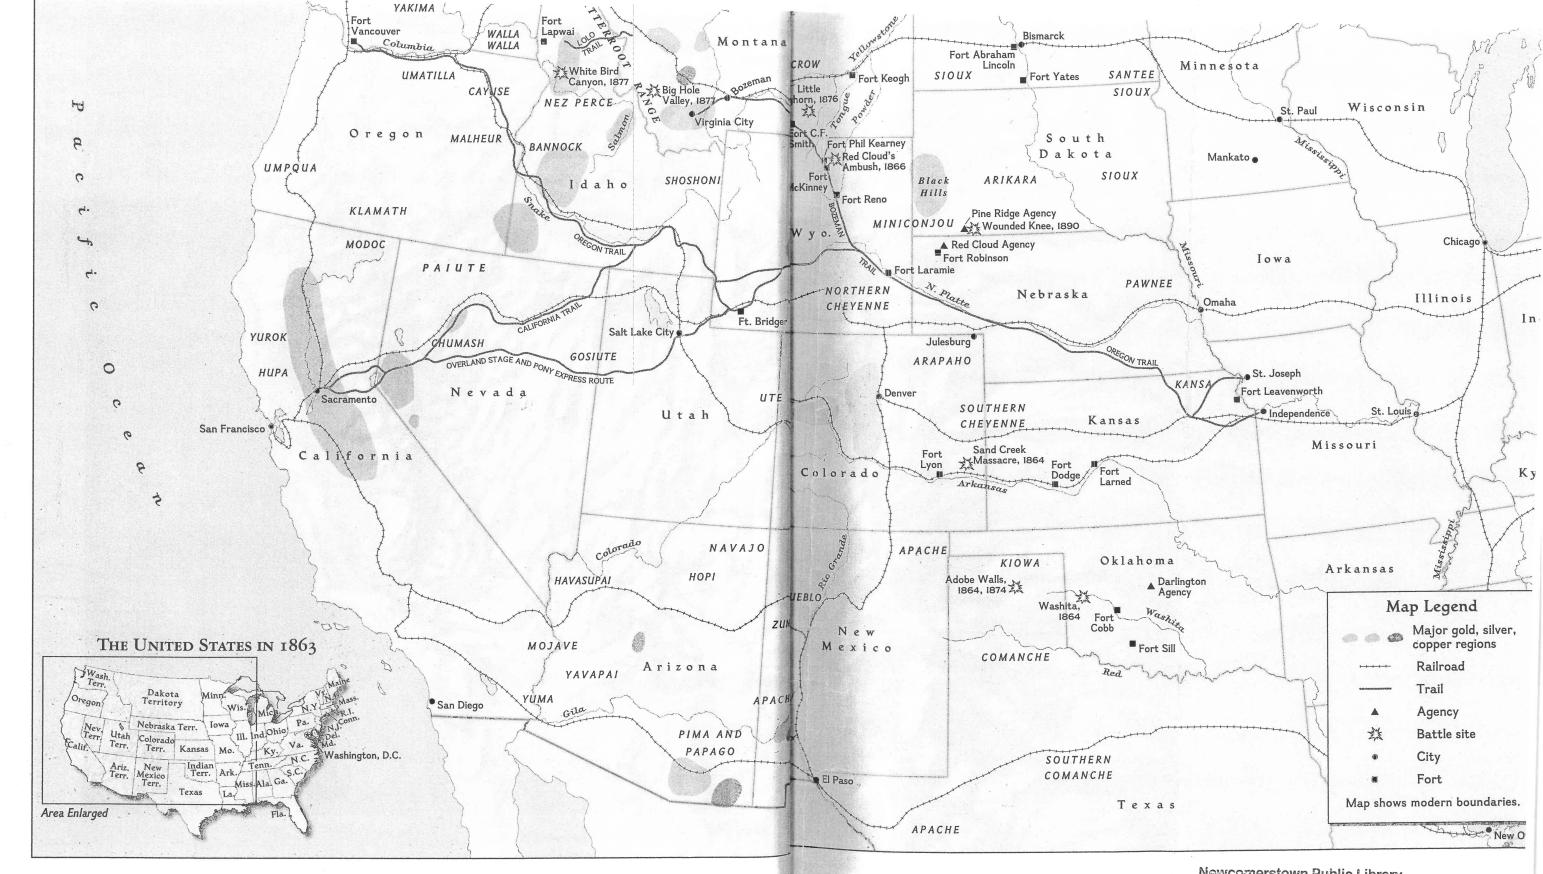

"Everybody seemed to find someone's bonnet or shoulder in the way, and to think himself or herself entitled to the best and most conspicuous place. . . . Still everything went off very well," wrote another. "These Indians are fine-looking men. They have all the hard and cruel lines in their faces which we might expect in savages; but they are evidently men of intelligence and force of character. They were both dignified and cordial in their manner, and listened to everything with great interest."

President Lincoln entered the room. Each of the chiefs gave him a quick, vigorous handshake. The President turned to their interpreter, John S. Smith, and said, "Say to them I am very glad to see them, and if they have anything to say, it will afford me great pleasure to hear them."

It was remarkable that Lincoln took the time to greet an Indian delegation at this moment in history. The war gave him little time for such diplomatic chores. It was March 1863, two years into the Civil War, and the Union did not yet have the upper hand. The Emancipation Proclamation had gone into effect at the beginning of the year, but not

Steve Guy, finance chalman, said the $50,000 was available as a result of an increase in village income tax gollection and a carry-over from the general fund.

. The permanent appropriations also showed increases in the water and sewage repair and improvement but Guy said those increases only reflected investments in certificates of deposit that had already existed but had not been listed on the approprintions.

The funds went from $20,000 to $102,000 and from $15,000 to $54,000 respectively. Guy said the village auditors had suggested the appropriations reflect those amounts. The total appropriations were $2,180,067, up from the 1987 appropriations of $1,829,967.

The appropriations also showed the village intends to use the final revenue sharing funds to purchase a computer system,

Sears announcing plans to purchase Western Auto

Sears, Roebuck & Co. announced plans-Wednesday to buy Western Auto Supply Co. in a two-part deal estimated at $250 million. There is both a Sears catalog store and a Western Auto Store in Newcomer-

Officials from Seam said it has entered into a stock purchase agreement to buy approximately $2.3 percent of Western Auto's stock at $19 per share. If Western Auto's board of directors agrees, Sears will purchase the remaining shares at the same 341 ....

Dan Loader of the Western Auto

Store in Newconierstown said the deal "doesn't really mean anything. It's just a corporate buy-out. There have been four or five owners since we've been here." Loader said that as-with any corporate dealings, it will take time to see if it has any impact on the local store.

Western Auto is based in Kansas City, Mo. and has 278 company owned stores and 1,570 independently owned dealer stores. The company sells a variety of products, ranging from hardware needs to automotive supplies, applicances, yard care equipment, and more.

THE STOCKER SCHOOL

The Stocker School was located on Tuscarawas County Road 4 near the Arch Bridge over I-77. The road is known as Stocker Ridge Road.

In 1948 this school was made into a 3 room school. The school closed at the end of the 1953-54 school term and the pupils were transported to Newcomerstown. The building was then used as a community center where square dances and other types of entertainment were held.

Addendum to Stocker School

Mrs. Congleton came twice a week from New Philadelphia to teach music. Several students remembered that she was very talented and helped the students appreciate music.

The health nurse came at certain intervals, especially for shots or when there was an outbreak of measles or mumps.

Mr. McFadden taught shop for boys and girls. The older girls made cutting boards in the shape of a pig. The young girls made tie racks. One girl's father never wore ties so he let her make a broom holder.

He also taught painting, water colors and other art classes. He had the older girls help the younger girls work on sewing projects. In spring the students went for a walk to identify flowers, plants, trees etc. He had the students make murals with wall paper. One student who excelled at this was Grace Kehl. She could draw very well. She drew several vegetables and had faces on them. The mural extended across one side of the room with smiling vegetable faces to show the food group sections.

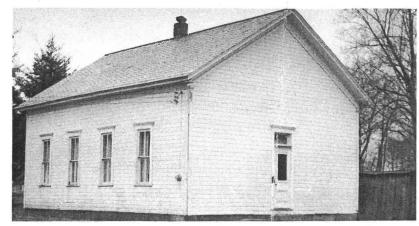

The water jug from Stocker School is now at Kings Church. Each student at the school brought a cup and a towel for sanitary purposes.

Stocker School became a consolidated school in 1948. Some of the other schools closed that year, and those students were sent to Stocker School. Two extra rooms were built on at that time. The name was changed to Oxford School. Esta Hart taught the first three grades, Clara Beal taught 4th and 5th, Harry McFadden taught 6th, 7th, and 8th grades.

THE KINGS SCHOOL

The Kings School is located on Oxford Township Road 107 also known as Kings Ridge Road. The building is still standing and is owned by the Kings Community Church which is adjacent to the school site. It is used for the annual reunions of the Oxford Township Schools.

The school closed at the end of the 1947-48 school term, and students were taken to Newcomerstown.

KINGS SCHOOL

The following information was taken from Cecile Cramlet's notes when she spoke at the Kings School's 100th Anniversary.

In this community in 1842 none of the buildings you see today were in existence with the exception of the one known as the Derry House. There was no church, no schoolhouse, only little log cabins dotted the hillsides. But those parents, like the parents of today, wanted their children to have the best education possible. They talked about a school and on April 16, 1842 a school board was formed to build and operate a school.

J.S. Long lived in the house where Mrs. James Little now lives. Joseph Wright came to the community to be the next director. Samuel Wright also served in that capacity. The directors had four meetings a year. Each spring the director visited the school. Later in the year the householders met and elected the director. Later they would meet and choose one of the three directors as chairman and another as clerk. In August or September the directors met and assessed the tax necessary to pay the teacher for that year. Their last meeting was to hire the teacher.

The length of the school term varied from 3 to 4 months, but the teacher was required to teach 26 days to earn a months pay. The pay was from $13 up, depending upon the ability of the teacher since some teachers taught only "readin, ritin, and rithmetic." In July 1848, English grammar was added, making four subjects taught.

Addendum to Post Boy School

Esta Hart taught three generations: Clara Bliss, John Morrison, and Clifford Morrison. The first two at Booth but the last at Newcomerstown.

When Virgil Bliss was in first or second grade he was walking to school and decided to take a skunk to school to show. When he tried to catch the skunk, he was sprayed. Of course, he missed the skunk but went on to school. The teacher promptly escorted him outside as soon as he stepped inside the door. He didn't come back to school for a week because he "smelled" so bad.

THE POST BOY SCHOOL

The Post Boy School was located in the little community of Post Boy on Tuscarawas County Road 3 - also known as Post Boy Road. The building was dismantled and the land where the school once stood is now owned by Clara Morrison.

The school closed at the end of the 1944-45 school term and students were taken to Stocker School. Mrs. Lois Miller was the last teacher.

THE BOOTH SCHOOL

The old school building was located at the foot of Ella Fenstermaker's hill near the present I-77 overpass. The teachers were Ernest Hogue, Violet Black and Addison Hursey.

The new school was erected in 1889-90 on top of the hill at the intersection of County Road 3 and Township Road 4.

School was discontinued in May 1948. Clara Beal was the last teacher. The building was later sold to Merle Opphile who converted it into a dwelling.
