PAGEANT MASTER — RICHARD MAHAR

HISTORY BY MISS LOIS ZIMMER

MUSIC BY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BAND

Under the direction of MR. ROGER STOFFER

REHEARSAL PIANIST — MRS. ROBERT BYRD

NARRATED BY MR. CHARLES YINGLING

CHOIR Directed by MRS. S. A. NEIGHBOR

Prologue of Pageant

The Queen of the 125th Anniversary Celebration accompanied by the Guard of Honor and her attendants arrives to welcome Newcomerstown's guests. Miss America arrives accompanied by eight states of the Union and is royally welcomed by Her Majesty, the Queen.

SCENE I

The Ballet of Creation

In a symbolic ballet we see interpreted the first appearance of life, the creation of land, the sky, and the flowers, God's masterpiece.

SCENE II

The Red Men

A temporary Indian village in Newcomerstown region ruled by Chief Eagle Feather. We see Indians and their squaws engaged in their customary occupations.

SCENE III

The Murder of Chief Eagle Feather by the Newcomer

Mary Harris, Chief Eagle Feather's wife, arouses the sleeping Indian village with cries that her husband has been murdered, and the Indians set off in pursuit of the captive squaw who has fled during the night.

SCENE IV

A Temporary Camp of British Soldiers

Col. Boquet and his men are seen waiting to receive white captives taken prisoner sometime back by Indian tribes.

SCENE V

The First Protestant Sermon at Newcomerstown

Rev. David Zeisberger, a Moravian missionary is seen conducting a church service in front of the cabin of Chief Netawatwes.

SCENE VI

The Arrival of the Pioneers

Arrival of a colony of settlers from New Jersey under the leadership of Nicholas Neighbor in covered wagons loaded with their earthly possessions.

An Early School

Education was not neglected in Newcomerstown. Compare this crude frontier school with the great modern plant that is Newcomerstown's educational institution of today.

S C E N E VIII

Newcomerstown as a Canal Port

Men are seen hauling grain, hides, apples, peaches, and other products raised in this region, to be loaded on canal boats for disposition in eastern markets.

S C E N E IX

The Coming of the Railroad

Great crowds are at the railroad station to see President Lincoln and to bid him their goodbyes before his departure by railroad after a brief stop at Newcomerstown.

S C E N E X

Civil War Scene

Crowds of men and women are seen arriving at the camp of Union soldiers in Newcomerstown. There is wild excitement, men are seen rushing off to enlist, soldiers are drilling, the crowds are gathering around to hear the daily reading of the war news.

S C E N E XI

The Central Chio District Fair in the Gay Ninties

Visitors are arriving from far and near to attend the fair in all sorts of conveyances. Even a "gasoline buggy" makes its appearance, creating much excitement. Many of the belles are dressed in the latest fashions, which are a far cry from the mode of dress of today. There are games, races, dancing, and music, all furnishing plenty of noise and excitement.

S C E N E XII

The Melting Pot of America

We see girls of many nations in a spectacular drill.

THE FINALE

Our picture would hardly be complete without dedicating a scene to the youth of our community. Let us picture for you the youth of today, who will hold in their hands the future of Newcomerstown, and carry it on to further glories.

It's pleasant to murmur, "Charge it," but this delightful state is apt to change to one of baffled resentment when the First rolls 'round — and bills pour in! No one actually likes to owe money and it is a queer quirk of human nature that causes the debtor to dislike, resent and even avoid his creditor. Penney's values its customer goodwill — that's why we're glad that no one is in debt to Penney's!
