

Civil War submarine is raised from watery grave

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — As cannons boomed along shore, the Confederate submarine H.L. Hunley finally returned to port Tuesday, 136 years after it carved its name in history as the first submarine to sink an enemy warship.

The Hunley, which sank with its crew of nine on Feb. 17, 1864, after ramming a spar with a black powder charge into the wooden hull of the Union blockade ship Housatonic, was lifted from its watery grave about four miles off nearby Sullivans Island shortly before 9 a.m.

Then it was secured on a barge and taken to a conservation lab at the old Charleston Navy base.

"This is so incredibly exciting," said Marc Ramsey of Richmond, Va., a Confederate Civil War re-enactor who helped fire a cannon as word came the Hunley had broken the surface. "This was like the stealth bomber of its time."

The hand-cranked sub, which was 40 feet long, 4 feet wide, 4 feet high and fashioned from locomotive boilers, is expected to remain at the Navy base at least seven years before going on display at the Charleston Museum.

Previous dives found that the vessel — named after New Orleans lawyer Horace Lawson Hunley, who financed it — was more technologically advanced than historical records indicated. Its spar, brought to shore earlier, could be tilted, perhaps making it easier to attach the powder charges or aim the spar when making an attack.

Scientists believe the Hunley was covered and filled with sand soon after it sank, preserving the metal and perhaps much of the remains of the crew and their personal effects. Divers found a hole in the side of the Hunley and a broken window in a low observation tower, allowing the sub to fill with sediment.

The crew will be buried with military honors after the inside of the sub is excavated.

The Hunley was found almost intact in 1995 by best-selling author and shipwreck hunter Clive Cussler, after four failed attempts in the previous 15 years. It took another five years of planning and arranging financing to lift the sub, which was covered by about 3 feet of sediment, from 30 feet of water.

South Carolina set aside $3 million to help bring the Hunley back to shore and start restoration work. The total cost of recovering and preserving the sub is estimated at $17 million.

To raise the vessel, divers slipped slings under the Hunley and attached them to a steel superstructure above the sub. The superstructure and the submarine were lifted together; dozens of sailboats, kayakers and pleasure craft hovered nearby as workers secured the Hunley on the barge that brought it to shore.

Local Man Writes Home
Through Three Years
Of Fighting in the Southland

The following extracts are taken from letters written back to Newcomerstown about seventy years ago from the late T.D. Neighbor to his father Absalom Neighbor, while the former was serving three years in the Civil War, mainly in Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama with Jehu Peck, Gilbert Lafayette "Lafe" Patterson, William P. Mulvane and others, enlisted in August 1862 at Crater Hall, where the Neighbor building now stands at the corner of River and Main Streets. The letters are now in possession of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Baxter.

Writing from near Louisville, Kentucky, under date of September 12, 1862, Mr. Neighbor says: "We can get small peaches here for one cent apiece, a common sized apple pie for ten cents, a small biscuit for one cent. We have a settler with us, but he robs us faster than that. Our old Colonel is measley strict with us, we can hardly get out of our lines, and very often drives folks away from the lines who bring us pies, cakes and fruit.

At Camp McAfee's Church, Ga., March 20, 1863 he writes, "Our mail was stopped a day or two ago by a band of Guerillas. They burned and robbed a train, but all is now moving along. We are so close to Johnson's army that our pickets are fighting day and night. Our artillerymen are trying their guns every few minutes upon the Rebs who do not reply. Very little loss so far on our part. As I write I can hear cannonading in the distance, but almost too far away to hear.

At Camp Brentwood, May 2, 1863, the writer states: "When I see the Rebs being brought in nearly everyday looking almost naked and barefoot, and then hear and read for myself the movements and results of our army, the victories obtained and the condition of the Rebs (it is awful) I do not think they can hold out much longer."

Then writing again from Nashville, Tennessee, August 2, 1863 he states, "Today I am 21 years of age, two more years more yet before I am free. Col. Dan Cook returned last night. Steamboats are whistling and wagons moving around as though it was any other day than Sunday, but so it is in time of war. I presume you know something about this since Morgan has visited Ohio in his rude manner. I got a newspaper yesterday from Doc Goudy. He thought he had forgotten that I was in the 52nd.

Without Blankets and Food

At Rossville, Georgia, September 16, 1863, "Am writing this in a state which one year ago I had no idea of seeing. Have marched 250 miles since leaving Nashville. Don't know where the Rebs are—saw about 500 deserters the other day ,we crossed a portion of Lookout Mountain, it is grand. The boys have all been without blankets for three nights—lay down with the earth for a bed and heaven for a covering. Besides have not had anything to eat for a day. Rations ran out and our supply train had not yet got up, though it will be here today. Our quartermaster got two crackers apiece for us this morning, which will make a taste. Had quite an excitement in our camp last night. All the boys here are short of rations, and yesterday went foraging. Capt. Neighbor _____ Some of our commissioned officers were killed, wounded or missing. And our Colonel taken prisoner. Our regiment lost this campaign. 207 men besides the sick. The 85th Illinois and 22nd Indiana who fought along with us, suffered more than we. The fight occurred on the banks of Peach Creek about 5 miles from Atlanta. Had to cross creek on drift and foot logs. Our regiment draws rations for only six men since the fight.

Chattanooga, October 15, 1864: "After leaving Atlanta the 29th of last month, were sent to Florence, Alabama to assist in driving the rebs from northern Alabama. Went by railroad as far as Athens where the rebs had destroyed the road.

Families Leave Home

The citizens of this state must be very badly informed concerning the Yankees for they all desert the farm homes, etc. I have seen very few families since leaving Rome---believe they will return after they find us out. Out of the squad that enlisted at home the night I did only three are with the company---Phineas Mulvane, Lafe Patterson and myself. We all sympathize with the friends of the slain.

Northern Army Crosses River
On pontoons in Drive
Against Southern Forces

This is a second article of a series of letters written by a Newcomerstown soldier in the Civil War, to his father, Absalom Neighbor, from letters now in possession of Mrs. Cora Neighbor—Ed.

Mc Affee's Church January 14, 1863

"Deserters still continue to come into our lines almost daily. They all concur that the days of the Confederacy are few. Please write often and send some stamps.

"Understand Will Dent has gone home, and think Johnny Sells will get his discharge before long. Hope we can keep Salathiel Neighbor with us, but fear he will be assigned to the command of some other company. A few days ago a fleet from Louisville, Kentucky, arrived bringing a large reenforcement for the army of the Cumberland, about 25,000 men. Paymasters of the fleet brought seven million dollars for us boys. Our boys have had to help unload boats for a couple days. In our tent just now is M. Mayberry, John Brown, Billy Chambers, E. Davis and George Neighbor.

Nashville, July 31, 1863

"It does me much good to hear of the spirit manifested in Newcomerstown during Morgan's raid scare. Am willing to bet on Tuscarawas county every day."

In a letter written from an Alabama camp, and mailed from Nashville, Tennessee, September 11, 1863:

"Have been on the move for a few days. Moved camp this morning across the Tennessee River, which is the prettiest river I have ever seen. Crossed on pontoons. The confederates burned the bridge before leaving here. Got a letter in the mail from J.D. Laughead. For supper we had coffee, a very little meat and some bread. Where is Dr. Goudy? Have written him two letters, but so far no reply.

McAfee Church, Georgia, January 2, 1864:

"East Tennessee is now in our possession, but after much hardship. The confederates are scattered to the four winds. The Nashville Union, received this evening, states that the Confederate front—it is horrible. One North Carolina paper says : "Peace only can prevent starvation."

In Camp near Atlanta, Georgia, August 1, 1864:

"We have suffered much, as you know, but have had not lost any in our regiment since July 19th at Peach Creek, although there has been some heavy fighting along our lines. The Confederate loss has been heavy since crossing the Chatahoochie River; it will amount to 30,000 men killed, wounded or missing, and we have captured 22 stands of colors. Their army is very much reduced and were it not for their very strong fortifications they could not withstand our army at this place any time at all. I do not think our loss since crossing the river will amount to more than 10,000.

They have attacked our position desperately only to be repressed with great slaughter. On the 28th of last month they made their last great charge. The next morning I went over the battlefield and I never since a soldier saw dead confederates as thick on the ground as where they charged in front of the 15th Corps. In front of one regiment next morning lay 140 dead confederates. Our regiment lost in all about 40 men. That days fight was a hard blow to the southern army. They could not succeed in moving our line, although one place our troops had nothing but a low barricade of rails to protect them. We had a visit the other day from a Chaplain, Rev. Peppers, formerly from Newcomerstown, Mayn Maberry and David Carr are all well. How do the people like the last proclamation calling for 500,000 men?

Seventeen Months at Andersonville
And Seven Other Prisons

A Sketch By One Who Was There

“That may well be”, I replied, “but we have a Grant for it, and ours it will be.”

The last remark of mine caused a hearty laugh among the “boys in blue”, and he kindly asked me to get down and take a drink of peach brandy at his expense, but I told him I feared the Lieutenant in charge of us would not permit me to do so. He called the officer and got permission to comply with the Gentleman’s request. I took a good, sound drink, but no more, he said, then I was welcome to, and urged me to drink some more, but I declined with the excuse of having to ride on the top of a box car, and if I drank too much I would be in danger of falling off, with the risk of a broken limb or neck perhaps, so thanking him for his kindness, I once more mounted the car.

When the track had been cleared and the wrecked train pulled onto a side track, we were once more under way, but not rejoicing; but instead of going toward Richmond, we started for Atlanta, where we arrived near nightfall, and were immediately put into the stockade with other Union prisoners there before us. There was one female prisoner among them, dressed in soldier’ clothes. She said she was a spy. She was not taken to Richmond with us, nor do I know whatever became her lot. The next morning we had some crackers, “hard tack” as it was called, issued to us, and again put upon cars, we were started for Richmond for a certainty.

Shortly after dark we arrived at Petersburg, but were kept there until midnight, when we were again underway, and soon reached the Rebel Capitol. We were taken through the lines between the two cities at night so we would not have an opportunity to see the rebel works. The train finally drew up and stopped at its destination, when we were ordered to dismount, and were marched into a large tobacco warehouse five stories high, and one hundred men put on each floor. I was in three of these buildings named respectively Royster, Pemberton, and the Scott buildings, before I was moved to other places. We were in these buildings three months. Here I desire to call attention of the readers of our food. What the officers received I was not aware, for they were taken immediately to Libby prison, a large tobacco establishment owned by Libby & Sons Tobacconists. For our fare we received a loaf of corn bread, without salt, or fat of any kind to season it, and a piece of partly spoiled mule meat, the animal, no doubt had been killed in battle or died from overwork, for they never would have killed the beast to feed us, for they were in too great need of the services of the animals. Bad as it smelled, we had to eat it, for we were hungry enough to eat most anything. Sometimes we had sweet potatoes. They were dug and shoveled into a wagon, hauled to the cook house, shoveled into the kettles and cooked, vines, dirt and all, and then shoveled back into the wagon, and hauled to our doors, when some of us were ordered to take our blankets well populated with “gray backs”, and into these we would put a certain number of shovelfull for each hundred men. Those of us who had old cans or plates made from a piece of iron taken from the roof of a car and bent into a somewhat proper shape, would put our boiled potatoes in these rude vessels, turn on the hydrant and filling them with water, we would stir the mess with our fingers or stick until it was a kind of soup. We would let it stand until the sand would settle to the bottom, when we could drink it off the top, and repeating the operation until the water would not be colored with potato pulp, and throw the residue away. It was now late in the fall, and the weather cold, yet we did not have a bit of fire with which to warm either our soup or our bodies.

It was too cold at night to sleep, and we would form into squads and circle around the room to hasten the circulation, and thus derive a little bodily warmth, when we would again lie down and try to get a little sleep, wishing it was morning, and time for something to eat. We suffered for food to supply our hungry stomachs and clothes to warm and protect our bodies.

At the end of three months we were taken to Bell Isle, and there we fared worse than in the tobacco house. We had nothing but the earth for a bed, and the starry sky for a covering. Our food was almost the same we received in the city, but by this time many had grown sick. No medicine was at hand, and no shelter for the sick ones, until finally, a rude sort of a hospital was put up. The rebels told us they had no medicine, for they had to run a blockade for it, and consequently it was scarce.

If any think there was no sympathy toward one another among prisoners, to them let the following fact, Damon and Pythias like, dispel any such belief. While on Belle Isle a few prisoners were paroled or exchanged, I do not know which, and I saw one man offer another who was among the number to leave, five dollars to let him go in his stead and to answer to his name. The man a brave and noble hero, accepted the offer; thus sacrificing his freedom, comfort, even life for his fellow man.

We were on Belle Isle about three months. About the first of March we were taken to Danville, Va. At this place we fared about the same as at Libby and Belle Isle, except at one meal, when we had a change of vegetable diet consisting of the remains of the product of some old cabbage patch which had lain out a Virginia winter; and gave us a wagonload to each hundred men. At that time I felt as though the time had come for me to shuffle off this mortal coil and appear before the Judge of both soldier and civilian, but thanks to a kind providence, with a constitution, I was enabled to stick through thick and thin.

We had about one month in Danville, but in that time there were a great many of our number sick and dying of small pox and nearly all other diseases which such treatment would bring on, so that as high as six and eight were carried out dead each morning, and this from a comparatively small number of prisoners when compared with the number at Libby and other places. I was paroled from Danville for about a week to make hickory brooms with which to scrub our pens. I would make two each day and take them in at night with a guard at my heels, and come out again in the morning. Thus I spent the week when I had a quantity sufficient for our need at that time. This was an agreeable change and gave me the benefit of fresh air, and exercise which revived me to quite an extent.

About the first of April we were taken to Andersonville, Ga., and I shuddered at the remembrance of our sufferings at that horrible place. Pen cannot picture, nor the mind conceive an idea of what we went endured while incarcerated at that place. I shall not attempt to describe to you all that we passed through here, but perhaps a short description of the place may not be improper. There were sixteen acres of ground enclosed by a stockade six feet under ground and twenty feet above it, hewn timbers ten inches thick, strong enough perhaps to pen up our largest wild animals, and into this enclosure we were driven like so many animals. Sentries walked their beats along the top of the stockade from one sentry to another, ready with a loaded gun to send the soul of anyone of us into eternity at the slightest provocation, and sometimes even at the wish of the sentry himself.

A good sized stream of water run through the middle of the enclosure, and from this we were to supply ourselves with water to our satisfaction. Sometimes the stream would appear literally alive with worms from the dead bodies of soldiers who in their weakness had crawled to its edge to slake their thirst but too weak to rescue themselves from the mud into which they would sometimes sink and expire, or perhaps some poor fellow crawled _____-(to be continued)

Major John Sargent

This gentleman was born in New Comerstown, Tuscarawas County, February 2, 1839. He was the eldest son of Levi Sargent.

When a young man he was employed as a clerk for a time in the store of Moore and Dixon, in New Philadelphia, and also in the same capacity in the banking establishment of A. Vinton.

During a portion of the time that his father was County Treasurer, young Sargent assisted him in the duties of that office.

In 1861 Mr. sergeant enlisted (as a private) in Co. A. 51st O.V.I. but went out with the regiment as a First Lieutenant. The 51st it will be remembered, was the first regiment that entered Nashville. At this point Lt. Sargent was made Assistant Provost Marshall of Nashville under Colonel Stanley Matthews. In July 1862, he was taken prisoner by General Forrest of Murfreesboro' and was held three months, passing much of his time at Madison, Georgia, where also was confined General Prentiss and the Shiloh prisoners. He was then confined for awhile in the penn at Columbia, South Carolina and finally after a few days in Libby, was paroled with other prisoners.

He at once joined his command at Nashville under General Rosecrans, and commanded his company at the battles of Dobbin's Ford and Stone River. For gallant and meritorious services he was soon afterwards promoted to Captain and assigned to Co. E with which he had participated in the battles of Chickamaugh and the storming of Look Out Mountain and Mission Ridge, under General Hooker. He subsequently commanded this company through the Atlanta campaign, engaging in the battles of Bussard's Roost, Resaca, Kennesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Lovejoy Station and other minor engagements.

At the close of this campaign Captain Sargent was detailed as Assistant Provost Marshal General on the staff of General Thomas of Atlanta, and served in that capacity till the close of the war in 1865. In August 1864, he was ordered to Chatanooga to take charge of the Provost Marshall Generals Office at that place, and while there was commissioned Major of his regiment. Mr. Sargent was never off duty except while a prisoner, and won an enviable reputation for ability and promptness. General Thomas pronounced him one of the most efficient officers on his staff.

In December 1867, Major Sargent married Miss Lizzie Hance, daughter of John Hance of New Jersey, and brother of Joseph C. Hance, Esq., of New Philadelphia. He had one son and one daughter, the former dying in infancy.

After the war, Mr. Sargent spent a year in the banking house of J.C. Helmick, of Pana, Illinois. In March, 1866, he was appointed United States Assessor of Internal Revenue of the sixteenth District of Ohio, and occupied the position six years. Since then he has been engaged in the Champion Planing Mill in New Philadelphia. He is a prompt, thorough business man, and a valued citizen.

A NOBLE RECORD.

A Sketch of Civil War History of Local Interest.

In the neighborhood where now is the village of Wolf, Tuscarawas county, O., seven farmer's boys enlisted in Aug. 1862, to serve for three years, and were joined to company "K" 98th, O. V. I. Capt. Parrish's company. They were: Henry Cline, D. B. Moore, John O. Buffington, Abraham Crum, Lewis Faulkner, Robert French, and William Lewis. Their regiment organized at Camp Mingo near Steubenville, O., crossed the Ohio river at Cincinnati, O., Aug. 24, and immediately entered upon active field service. Its first battle was at Perryville, Ky., where the regiment was fiercely engaged and suffered a loss of 230 men killed and wounded. The squad of seven whose names are mentioned above, suffered a loss in that battle of three killed, Abraham Crum, Lewis Faulkner and Robert French. Two severely wounded, D. B. Moore and John O. Buffington. One William Lewis was knocked down by a caisson wagon and badly bruised during the confusion of a retreat from first position; this left but one of the squad unhurt, Henry Cline, who followed the fortunes of the regiment without missing a march or a battle throughout all its history; he now lives at Beach City, O., an honored veteran, a splendid citizen. D. B. Moore recovered from his wound, was unable to march, the surgeons desired to discharge him, but he protested and appealed to his regimental commander for a detail as Orderly on Gen'l Mitchell's (Brigade Commander) staff. It was granted him, and he did effective service and was mustered out with his company. John O. Buffington recovered from his wound, rejoined his company and was again severely wounded at Kenisaw Mt., Ga., June 27, 1864. He recovered from this wound and was mustered out with his company. William Lewis recovered and served until the close of the war.

These farmers' boys were raised in the quiet seclusion of country homes, educated at the district school, trained to civil pursuits, knew nothing of war. They were patriots, inspired by the love of country. They were severely tested within six weeks after they entered the dark and bloody ground of Kentucky; they were true to their vows; they suffered as but few were called upon to do. It was this kind of smooth faced boys who filled the ranks of the Union Army and saved the Nation.

DEATH OF AN OLD SOLDIER.

John H. McElhaney was born Dec. 28, 1837, and died Apr. 1, 1906, at the home of his brother, Frank McElhaney, near Guernsey, O.

At the beginning of the civil war Mr. McElhaney enlisted in the service for the defense of the stars and stripes, which, untarnished like his record and general reputation, floated grandly o'er his grave as he was gently lowered to his last resting place on earth. On Dec. 17, 1861, he enlisted in Co. I, 80th O. V. I. He was discharged at Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 13, 1865. Since his discharge he spent most of his time in the far West, returning Dec. 3, 1905, to the home of his brother, Frank McElhaney. Comrade McElhaney was sick when he returned home, and gradually grew worse until his gentle spirit took its flight to the God who gave it. Thus ended the career of another of our country's defenders. On being asked by a near relative if he knew he could not get well, he replied "Yes; I have known it for some time, and I am prepared for the change." Funeral service was conducted by Rev. Stewart of Kimbolton. R. D. W.

"THE THREE OLD VETS"

John C. Joss

Dr. W. W. Richardson

James M. Knisely

"The Three Old Vets" comprised Tuscarawas-co's most popular entertainment trio during the latter part of the 19th century. New Philadelphia Civil War veterans, they advertised the name of that city and the county at many national encampments of the Grand Army of the Republic. Musicians all, they impersonated "the Spirit of '76" at many times, going as far from home as Chicago and St. Louis.

John C. Joss, a jeweler, was the bugler of the trio. He also spent some of his time whistling old fife tunes with the aid of his fingers. Dr. W. W. Richardson, a dentist, was the bass drummer of the outfit. James M. Knisely, a carpenter by trade, was an expert snare drummer, having served as a drum major in the 52nd regiment. They are gone now, but their reputation lingers and is reviewed whenever Civil War veterans gather for celebrations.

The three were inseparable companions in their twilight years.

Distant Drums' mystery solved

Civil War medal winner migrated to Missouri

By DORIS KEENER

Freeman Davis, one of the two Tuscarawas County men who won Congressional Medals of Honor for their Civil War service, died Feb. 23, 1899, at Butler, O., where he had resided for 25 years.

His death came less than a year after he was awarded the medal on March 22, 1898, "most distinguished gallantry in action Missionary Ridge, Tenn., Nov. 25, 1863."

Those facts about the man who at age 19 enlisted in the Ohio Volunteer Infantry's 80th Regiment Oct. 7, 1861, in his native village of Newcomerstown have been obtained from U.S. military records in the National Archives.

The records contain no explanation of the year delay in awarding the medal and details of Davis' exploits at Missionary Ridge.

They do, however, explain why attempts were made last spring — during preparation of a Times-Reporter historical section, "Distant Drums. . . Echoes of the Civil War," — to locate descendants of Davis in the Newcomerstown area were unsuccessful. He and his family moved from that area more than 100 years ago.

The other county Medal of Honor winner, Milton Blickensderfer of Shanesville, and his descendants were featured in the special section.

IN A LETTER that Davis wrote in 1880, requesting his congressman's assistance in obtaining a military pension, Davis said he had a wife and four small children and had moved to Butler in the spring of 1874.

He claimed he was "wholly incapacitated from the performance of any manual labor and have been so since the winter of 1873." He described his disability as chronic rheumatism and its effects, "wholly and solely caused from the hardship and exposure endured by me while in the service of the United States and during the late rebellion." He said he contracted his disability about July 1865 at Little Rock, Ark., where the 80th Regiment was mustered out Aug. 13, 1865.

Davis sought the congressman's help because no action had been taken on an application for a pension he had filed with the War Department a year earlier. The congressman apparently forwarded the letter to the department's Record and Pension Division and it became part of Davis' file.

THE FILE ALSO contains an 1879 affidavit from David A. Mulvane, 35, of Princeton, Ill., a first sergeant with the 80th Regiment, who said he had known Davis "from boyhood." He said Davis was a "young man in sound bodily health, and free from rheumatism," when he enlisted in the army in Newcomerstown in October 1861.

Mulvane wrote that he had served with Davis in the same company and regiment for about four years and "also was personally intimate with said Capt. Freeman Davis from the date of his discharge from the army in August A.D. 1865 up to the spring of 1874."

From such intimate acquaintance and observation, Mulvane wrote, he had "every reason to believe that claimant's health has not been good since his discharge from the service, he being troubled, in affiant's opinion, to quite an extent with chronic rheumatism and not able to perform more than half the labor of a healthy man, from the effects of said rheumatism," from his discharge in 1865 to 1874.

Mulvane was the grandfather of Margaret Mulvane Esry of Santa Rosa, Calif., who recently donated a book on the 80th Regiment to the Newcomerstown Historical Society. Written by D.F. Fryer of Newcomerstown, a sergeant of Company D., with the aid of a diary he kept from 1861 to 1865, it was printed in 1904. The regimental history is available in the historical society's Temperance Tavern Museum at Newcomerstown.

THE RECORDS DO NOT show when Davis' pension was approved, but he apparently received at least a small one since his file includes an 1883 affidavit which accompanied a claim for a pension increase. He sought the increase because, by 1883, he was "wholly unfit and physically unable to perform even professional or skilled labor on account of chronic rheumatism and its effects."

Davis, who was 5-foot-7½ and light complected, had grey eyes and brown hair. He enlisted as a private, but was promoted to sergeant Jan. 12, 1862 — even before the 80th Regiment marched from Camp Meigs at the Tuscarawas County fairgrounds in Dover to Uhrichsville Feb. 17, 1862.

There the 919 recruits from Carroll, Coshocton, Guernsey, Columbiana and Tuscarawas County boarded a train for Camp Chase at Columbus.

Only one-fifth of them answered roll call when the regiment was mustered out 3½ years later. The remainder had succumbed to disease, wounds, exposure, etc., as they battled through Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia before joining Gen. William Sherman's March to the Sea.

A RATHER PUZZLING document in the file is a letter addressed to "Gen. Prentiss, commanding at Helena, Ark." Dated April 13, 1863, while the regiment was stationed briefly at a camp near that Mississippi River town, it was signed by seven officers of the 80th. They include three first lieutenants from Tuscarawas County; Daniel G. Hildt of Company E, Daniel Korn of Company K and T.W. Collier of Company A.

The letter is a request that "Freeman

Davis, sergeant of Co. B, 80th Ohio Vol. Infy., be commissioned as an officer of the Negro troops being raised in this vicinity."

The officers attest to the fact that "Sergeant Davis has been with the regiment since its organization and has proved himself a gentleman and soldier and worthy of a position in the Army of the Union."

He did not receive the requested commission.

AT MISSIONARY RIDGE, where Davis' exploits belatedly earned him the Medal of Honor, the 80th, on Nov. 25, 1863, "entered the fight just east of the tunnel," according to the Fryer's book, "and had reached the summit of Mission Ridge (also known as Missionary Ridge) when Gen. Pat Elehern came through the tunnel and got in our rear. Nothing seemed more certain than to be captured or killed.

"We started amid a shower of shot and shell in front, flank and rear, and had the pleasure of enjoying both a fight and footrace at the same time. We never stopped until we had advanced far enough to pass around their left flank, fell in with the reserve and again ascended that steep mountain on whose summit we captured 34 pieces of artillery.

"For a short time the fighting was hand to hand. Our enemy was composed of veterans. Soon they were compelled to retreat down the eastern slope of the ridge, completely demoralized, and Eragg, Breckinridge and Buckner barely escaped capture as they retired down the mountain toward Chicamauga Station; and the battle of Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge was won.

"The 80th's loss in killed, wounded and missing was 150. When a number of the other regiments had lost their colors, ours having lost four colorbearers, Serg't Finley had born our standard through that iron storm in triumph.

"The Union losses in the Chattanooga campaign were 750 killed, 4529 wounded and 330 missing, or a total of 5609. The number of rebels killed and wounded was 10,085. We captured 6142 prisoners, 60 pieces of artillery and a large wagon train."

At the close of the campaign, the commanding general, U.S. Grant, issued a congratulatory order "to the brave armies of the Cumberland, the Ohio, the Tennessee and their comrades from the Potomac for the recent splendid victory achieved over the enemy."

DAVIS, ACCORDING TO his file, had returned from a 30-day furlough less than a month before the battle of Missionary Ridge.

The following Jan. 21 — at Huntsville, Ala., Davis re-enlisted in the 80th Regiment for three years. On July 12, 1864, at Cartersville, Ga., he was promoted to second lieutenant and transferred from Company B to Company D. Three and a half months later he was elevated to first lieutenant and, on June 19, 1865, he was promoted to captain of Company K, the position he held when the regiment was mustered out in mid-August that year.

Neither the identity of his first wife nor the names of their "four small children" appear in Davis' file. However, a second wife, Elida Jane Crawford Drope Davis, made application in March 1899 for pension money Davis had accrued between Feb. 4, 1899, when he had received his regular monthly check, and his death 19 days later.

The application states that Elida, whose first marriage took place in 1857 in Knox County, O., and Freeman were married Feb. 6, 1895, at Butler.

That application, and the proofs of marriage that accompanied it, closed the file on this "wholly incapacitated" Tuscarawas County Civil War medal winner.
