Canal Once Provided Ice Supply For Newcomerstown Residents

Patterson's ice house was long a familiar landmark here to boatmen on the old Ohio canal near the turn of the last century.

The 40-by-60-foot, barnlike building stood near the old canal wasteway, which was about 100 yards west of the canal lock at the west end of Canal st. For years it was used for the storage of ice, cut from the canal during the winter months for use during the summer. It was abandoned shortly after 1900 and finally disappeared entirely one day when a group of boys, who were playing in it, accidentally set it afire.

A smaller structure used for the same purpose and owned by G. L. Patterson, was situated east of the lock at the west end of Canal st. It was torn down later.

Employed at the time as an ice wagon's special policeman, recalls that the men used a saw with extra long teeth. The cakes of ice were towed to the ice house chutes, down which they were slid into the ice room. Here they were packed in sawdust and stored until summer.

Bert also served as wagon man, driving the ice wagon about the streets and selling chunks to residents. Today's iceman has a relatively easy job, according to Mr. Sells, who explained that the canal ice could not be "chipped" to split it but had to be sawed into smaller pieces.

The proprietors of the 13 village saloons and of a number of meat markets were customers of Mr. Patterson's ice houses. They were favored with a special commercial rate of 20 cents per hundred pounds. The house rate was 35 cents per hundred.

Dual walls were built and sawdust packed in between in constructing the ice houses. A two-foot space was left between the outside wall and the ice. More sawdust was packed in this opening. The insulation proved sufficient to protect the ice against dissolution during the hot summer months.

A small charge was made by the state for cutting the ice from the canal. At times, especially after a long freezing spell, the ice would be frozen to a thickness of 14 to 18 inches.

The introduction of mechanically-produced ice did not immediately sounded the ice house's death knell. Several times the mechanical equipment broke down, throwing in the trade to Mr. Patterson, who once again harnessed the team to the old ice wagon and traversed the village streets selling his "nature-produced" ice.

BEHIND the SCENES!

Just step behind the scenes of our Prescription Department for a few minutes. Immediately before your eyes you will see one of our experienced pharmacists at work. First of all, he studies the prescription. Next, he takes one of the numerous bottles from the shelves and carefully weighs or measures the required amount of the medicinal product. Next, you see him combine the several ingredients in a skillful manner. Finally, you see him write the direction label and carefully check every step that has been performed in the compounding of the prescription to insure absolute accuracy.

Almost every section of the world has contributed to the stock that you see before your eyes. All of the useful drugs have been brought together and made instantly available to you and others when the occasion arises.

The pharmacist who handles these potent medicines must have a full knowledge of them.

52nd OHIO
VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

1862-1865

Nixon B. Stewart

known as Camp Sheridan. We were here five weeks, during which time the measles infected the camp and many died in the hospital with them, also many had fatal pneumonia.

We drilled six hours a day, when not on other duty. Quite a number of old regiments were in the division, among the number the 8th Wisconsin, composed mostly of "lumbermen," and they were the cleanliest set of men in the service. In the 14th Michigan were two companies of half-breed Indians, who were famous for their drill as skirmishers.

A foot race was arranged between the 8th Wisconsin, 14th Michigan, 85th Illinois and 52nd Ohio, the prize being a silk guidon or marker. It was placed on a hill, half a mile away. The soldier who touched the flag first, was to bear it away as the prize of his regiment. The race was very exciting. Down into the valley and up the slopes we went, yelling at every step. Little Phil leading the charge with his hat on the point of his sword, riding the same horse that was shot from under him at Stone River six weeks later. The flag was reached by Billy Armstrong of Company H, of our regiment, and he was placed upon the shoulders of his comrades and borne into camp in triumph.

Camp life was not conducive to contentment in our army experience. We were busy drilling and policing our camp, but thoughts of home and friends grew more intense. Letters came. They spoke of Thanksgiving. There was to be song and sermon in the old church. The table spread and all the children home but the loyal soldier boys. And the loyal land would send up a song and psalm for the blessings it had numbered. Some grew homesick and died of the terrible longing for home. The symptoms were, languor, debility, low fever, loss of appetite—death. But he who died thus, gave his life as truly as if a bullet had found his heart. Loved ones at home had something to answer for. Many a boy died, just because his dearest friends did not send him a prescription twice a week—price three cents.

But it was not all dull and dreary in camp. The only thing was, that it was so unlike home. Not a familiar sound in it all. No sweet Sabbath bells, no lowing herds, no chanticleer's shrill crow, no rattling pavements, no shutting doors—what was there to cheer the heart and revive the spirits? Hark! At break of day from field and wood and hill, come the sweet notes of the reveille. Bugle answers to bugle, fifes warble, and through the roaring of the drum you catch the soul stirring swell of a full band, playing in an unseen camp. There is music everywhere. When the martial strains have ceased, the contrast begins in the hideous delphia, and Carrollton, Ohio, where he now lives and fills the position.

Company D lost more men than any company in the regiment. Nineteen were killed or died from wounds, twenty-six were wounded, fourteen died of disease in the hospital, and thirty-four were mustered out with the company. The company is before me today, and most of their faces are familiar. There is Lowmiller, who was a recruit, and fell at Dallas. There is Johnny Sill, how his poor mother used to come to our reunions, while she lived, and listen to stories of her brave boy's death, as he went up Kenesaw, hat in one hand, and gun in the other. And I see poor Francis Grace, who fell on the breast works, and James Beard, so young and loyal. Then Armstrong and Daugherty and Shackle, all of whom lay in the sun that afternoon mortally wounded. I then turn to the living, whose foreheads are wrinkled and locks are gray. There are the two Neighbor boys, George and Theodore. George was a prisoner at Peach Tree, and in Andersonville six months, and "Dode," as we called him, came out with as vivid a recollection of what he saw, as any man in the army. He is a well-to do merchant of New Comerstown, O. He never misses a reunion. He has two excellent qualities, he loves home, has an excellent family, and he loves the boys who saved our country. Jehu Peck came home, settled down as a shoe merchant in New Comerstown, Ohio, and is a clean, christian gentleman, the kind of a man that makes a good citizen. There is Gilbert L. Patterson, with the best of a record as a soldier and citizen, as well. And John Smith, a cheerful, whole-souled companion, who, because of his smooth, boyish face, was known as "Kate." There was John Kirk with his big knapsack, and Anthony Hartley the great forager. The rebs captured him at Fenn's bridge, loaded with chickens and forage of all kinds. I rethe hand-scratched earthworks less than 100 yards from the Confederates. It also was painfully apparent to the young private that his regiment was greatly reduced in size. Eighteen were dead and 126 wounded. Most of them remained lying unattended between the lines.<sup>23</sup>

There were very few soldiers in his brigade who did not respect and admire Daniel McCook. "Colonel Dan," his men universally called him, was a scion of Ohio's "Fighting McCooks" — two families that furnished 14 sons to the United States army and navy, all but one becoming commissioned officers. Thus far the war had claimed two of his eight brothers as well as their father, Daniel McCook Sr., who was mortally wounded in a skirmish during Confederate Brigadier General John Hunt Morgan's Ohio raid of July 1863.<sup>24</sup>

As an attorney in partnership with William T. Sherman at Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1860, McCook organized a volunteer militia company, tendering its services to the Federal government in February 1861. The company, with McCook as its captain, became part of the 1st Kansas Infantry which received a bloody baptism that August at Wilson's Creek, Missouri, suffering 284 casualties. In July 1862 he was commissioned colonel of the 52nd Ohio, and subsequently promoted to brigade command. One of McCook's subalterns, First Lieutenant Lansing J. Dawdy of the 86th Illinois, fondly remembered: "Dan was proud of his brigade, and perhaps no brigade commander tried harder to have the best drilled brigade in the service. He never missed an opportunity to drill and instruct both officers and men. In fact, he went so far as to have only one commissioned officer drill the regiments, and sergeants command the companies. This for instruction. All were taught that no matter what happened in battle, they must hang together — that their greatest strength was in unity of action."<sup>25</sup>

The morning of June 27 brought McCook to the apogee of his military career. Perhaps sensing impending doom, he strolled through the brigade's prone ranks, mouthing the words of Macauley's poem and admonishing everyone to lie low. "Bullets whistled over us from the enemy's skirmishers," observed Private Theodore Neighbor of Company D, 52nd Ohio. "Colonel Dan did not seem to think there was any danger of himself being shot, and when he told Jonathan Sills of Co. D to lie down — Sills having raised up to look over into the woods from whence the bullets came — 'You will get your head shot off,' Sills replied: 'You might get your head shot off.' Colonel Dan replied: 'Tis an easy matter to fill my place and a very hard matter to fill yours, now lie down.' Fifteen or twenty minutes later Sills was killed."<sup>26</sup>

Major James T. Holmes noticed an ominous stillness pervade the regiment. "All knew that many must fall and each heart communed with itself in these few brief moments of rest. Some were gazing upon a sun that would only shine in after days to

Tri-Regimental Reunion
 The 51st, 52nd and 80th Ohio

NEWCOMERSTOWN, O., AUGUST 23rd and 24th, '04

BIGGEST SOLDIERS' REUNION

Ever Held in Our City — Fine Program, Hundreds of Old Veterans, Lots of Music, Elegant Weather.

Probably the largest, most enthusiastic, patriotic and enjoyable event in the history of our city was that of the Tri-Regimental Soldiers' Reunion held here on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Our city was elaborately and gorgeously decorated from center to circumference with flags, bunting, etc., and presented a handsome, patriotic appearance, doing credit to our business men and citizens alike, evincing flattering comment from her thousands of delighted and honored visitors.

The early morning train from the north brought a fine, large assembly of old veterans and their wives from Canal Dover and New Philadelphia, who paraded our streets escorted by the Boy Drum Corps directed by James Knisely of New Phil'a, member of the 52nd. It was a splendid display and attracted many interested spectators. At 9:15 a. m. the train from the south brought a big crowd of the boys in blue, under the escort of Broome's celebrated drum corps of Cambridge. Trains from the east and west were loaded with old vets from the Twin Cities, Coshocton and other points.

At 1:30 p. m., Tuesday, the drum corps concert drew a large crowd to the big tent erected in T. D. Neighbor's elegant lawn, where the opening exercises began. After a song entitled "America," by the Hadyn Quartet, the assembly was led in prayer by Rev. S. A. Corl. Then came the address of welcome by Mayor D. F. Fryer, responded to by Rev. N. B. Stewart, after which there was music and general hand-shaking. At 3 p. m. there was an address by Hon. R. A. Cassidy of Canton. Each of these addresses were fine and elicited hearty and prolonged applause.

A grand dress parade was given at 5 p. m., under the general command of Col. Pren. Metham, assisted by staff-officers M. B. Kennedy and Wm. Tidrick. The veterans of the 80th were commanded by Capt. O. C. Powleson, the 51st by Capt. Nichols, the 52nd by Capt. Rothacker, and the ex-soldiers of other regiments by Capt. R. W. Walton. The parade was led by the different drum corps, and was witnessed by at least 5,000 people.

In the evening the military concert given by the famous Hyperion Band drew an immense crowd about the tent and the camp fire opened up with loud cheers of enthusiasm.

The principal speakers of the evening were Judge Voorhees of Coshocton, Rev. S. A. Corl and Comrade John I. Wilson, all of whom were heartily applauded.

Wednesday morning the several drum corps paraded our streets, reminding our citizens of the arrival of the second day of the reunion, a "red letter" event in the town's history. 8:30 was the hour set for regimental business meetings, which occupied about one hour and a half. The old comrades and many citizens then re-assembled at the tent to listen to an able address by Comrade John I. Wilson which was the crowning feature of the reunion and left a lasting impression upon all of his hearers. At 11 a. m. the hour for hand-clasps and parting words arrived, and all felt that the reunion had been a grand affair. Comrade T. D. Neighbor conducted most of the meetings, and although somewhat arduous, he enjoyed the occasion from start to finish.

The executive committee truly deserves credit for their management of affairs, and it seems the old soldiers were quite well satisfied with the entertainment they received at the hands of our citizens.

Following are the names of the comrades of three regiments who registered at headquarters:

A PROMINENT CITIZEN

Passes Away Suddenly, the Result of Heart Disease.

20 Oct. 1909

Gilbert L. Patterson, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Newcomerstown, and an old soldier, died suddenly at his home on Goodrich st., last Saturday evening Oct. 16, of heart trouble. He rode up town about 5 p. m. in a buggy, and not feeling well, stopped at the office of Dr. R. A. Goudy. He grew worse, and the doctor accompanied him home in his buggy, and assisted him into the house. He rapidly declined and expired at 7:15. — Mr. Patterson was born Dec. 20, 1839, about 3 miles from Liberty, (now Kimbolton) in Guernsey co. His father, Elias Patterson, moved to Newcomerstown about 65 years ago. On Jan'y 22nd, 1868, Mr. Patterson was united in marriage to Barbara Ann Felver, and to them four children were born, three of whom are living—Dora, Gilbert and Will, all of this city. George died at the age of 18 mos. Mr. Patterson enlisted in Co. D, 52nd O. V. I. in 1862, and served during the war. He was a member of the G. A. R. Post of this city, belonged to the Lutheran church, and was also a Mason. The funeral service was held at his late residence, Tuesday, 2 p. m., conducted by Rev. O. C. Kramer, assisted by the Masons and G. A. R. Post, and attended also by the Eastern Stars. Quite a number of Masons from neighboring lodges were present. Mr. Patterson was formerly identified with the business interests of the town, and was always a staunch politician of the democratic sort. — He enjoyed the confidence and respect of his fellow townsmen, and was an active and useful man.

By some means the death of Gilbert B. Patterson, aged about 45, son of Mrs. Dan L. Patterson, was not recorded in this paper last week. "Gib", as he was familiarly called, was of a quiet, modest disposition, but very industrious and active. His father, well known in this community, and throughout the county, died about 6 years ago. Gilbert is survived by his mother, brother William and sister Dora. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, Sept. 10, from the Patterson home on Goodrich street, the Rev. O. C. Kramer, pastor of the Lutheran church, officiating. Interment was made in the local cemetery.
