MEET THE DIRECTOR - NEAL HANSLIK

Neal Hanslik was first introduced to a Cargill production in the mid-60's in Lubbock, Texas, when his mother was talent chairperson for the Junior League Follies there. He had just completed high school at Schreiner Institute.

There followed some studies at Texas Tech University, but it was not long before he was directing Jerome H. Cargill shows himself; his first assignment was in East Stroudsburg, PA in 1968.

In 1969 Hanslik became a student at the Neighborhood Playhouse of the Theatre in New York City. He considers himself fortunate to have studied acting under Sanford Meisner and William Anderson. His dance instruction, ballet, modern and jazz, was with Matt Maddox, and Liz and Clive Thompson of the Martha Graham Company.

Following this preparation he spent ten years working on Broadway for producers Robert Whitehead and Roger Stevens, and directing Cargill shows in cities across the country, all the way from Indianapolis, Miami and St. Paul to Sedalia, MO. He also returned to the Neighborhood Playhouse as technical director.

In the early 70's he appeared on such soap operas as Search For Tomorrow and Love Of Live. He has worked with actors such as Katherine Hepburn, Agnes Moorehead, John Houseman, Ricardo Montalban, Kim Basinger, Michael Nouri and others.

The "booming" 80's saw Hanslik in Dallas, operating his own special events and public relations firm, but with much of his energies devoted to fundraising for various arts groups.

Not long ago he responded to an SOS from Cargill to return to his native Lubbock; a show needed rescuing because the director had become ill. That's when Neal discovered he really missed the theater, and particularly the musical variety productions enthusiastically staged by amateurs, for good causes.

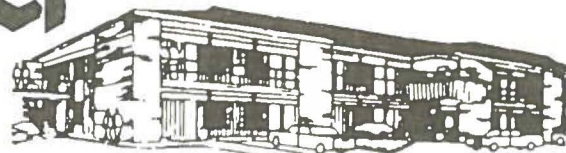

That's what brought Neal Hanslik back to Cargill. And that's what has brought in to Newcomerstown. THANK YOU NEAL!
