FOREWORD

Prior to 1885, many thousands of couples from West Virginia, Ohio, and other states eloped to Pennsylvania, eager to be wed in a state which did not require a marriage license. West Alexander, a small village just inside the western Pennsylvania line and halfway between Washington, Pa., and Wheeling, on the old National Road (Route 40) soon gained a far-flung reputation as a "Gretna Green." The local Justices of the Peace became famous as "Marrying Squires." They and the village ministers performed some 7,000 marriages during the years until Pennsylvania, by Act of Assembly of 1 Oct. 1885, joined its neighbors in requiring marriage licenses.

Among the Justices who performed many of those marriages were two famous Squires: Isaac Mayes and his son, Joseph Finley Mayes. The excellently kept Registers of these two men are the basis for this book.

Isaac Mayes,<sup>1</sup> son of pioneer Washington County settlers, Charles and Margaret (Finley) Mayes, was commissioned as Justice of the Peace on 13 July 1811. He began recording marriages on 6 October 1811. Before his death on 16 July 1844, he had married 930 couples. His register comprises the first section of this book.

Joseph Finley Mayes,<sup>1</sup> eldest son of Isaac and his first wife, Elizabeth (Alexander) Mayes, was born on 25 August 1814 in West Alexander. He was elected to the post of Justice of the Peace in 1862 and continued in this office, performing 2,674 marriages between 22 May 1862 and 1 February 1887. His fees totalled $8,354.55, according to his records. His marriages are listed in the second section of this volume.

The compilers of this book have used the original Registers, which are arranged chronologically. To make it easier to find the names of the couples married by the two Squires, each record has been arranged alphabetically for both bride and groom. Dates, home-towns, and all other information in the Registers has been included. We have followed the original spelling used by Isaac and Joseph Mayes, even when we knew it differed from current usage. It should also be remembered that prior to 1863, West Virginia was still a part of Virginia, and naturally the Squires used that designation.

It has long been a problem for historians and genealogists to find proof of Pennsylvania marriages. It is our hope that this book will help to fill blanks in family charts. We are sure that many will be surprised to know that their ancestors journeyed to a little town called West Alexander to be married. Many of you, we hope, will be pleased, too, to find this proof of a marriage which occurred at a time and place where few such events were recorded.

We wish to thank the Citizens' Library of Washington, Pa., and Irene Lignian, C.G., for supplying the photocopies of the original records from which we have worked.

- Helen L. Harriss, C.G.
